We, the undersigned members of the Emory University faculty, believe that it is in the best interests of the University that the response to the present confrontation be to use every possible instrument of University self-governance. So long as life and limb are secure, and property is not being damaged, all efforts should be turned towards communication and negotiation. Once an injunction is served, the decisions governing police action would be largely out of the University's hands. Only in extreme circumstances should a court injunction be sought against College students without the assent of the College faculty .
